Welcome...

As we move into the last stages of the professional cricket season at both domestic and international level the NZCPA is looking forward to an exciting events programme getting underway with our Samsung Masters series (throughout February and March) and the popular Masters Weekend (early April) to round out a busy year.

The Samsung Masters series is an important programme of matches where our Masters team plays against select representative teams to showcase the games former stars in areas that do not see a lot of top level cricket, whilst at the same time assisting the development of our future talent. The Masters Weekend in Queenstown is our most important event for our past player members and is gaining in popularity each year. In addition to the T20 cricket competition on the weekend there will also be a number of other activities for members to enjoy including the cocktail function on the opening night and dinner after the first days play. We are delighted that some of our more senior members in our Patron Barry Sinclair, Artie Dick, Robert Anderson and John Sparling have confirmed their attendance and we hope that as many past player members as possible can attend the event – it is a great opportunity to get together with cricket colleagues of the past and enjoy a weekend away.

The Domestic Competitions have been as competitive as ever this season with the Auckland Aces taking out a tight HRV Cup by beating defending champions the Central Districts Stags in a match that went down to the wire. In taking out the HRV Cup the Aces have now won the right to represent New Zealand in the Champions League later in the year. The One Day Final was a fantastic conclusion to a close competition with Auckland claiming the title and displaying their pro prowess in both the shorter formats of the game with 7 rounds remaining in the historic Plunket Shield every team remains in contention. The Blackcaps have had a tough series against Pakistan as their final preparation prior to their departure for the ICC World Cup on the sub continent in early February. This is the world's most important cricket competition and we wish the team all the best knowing that if they can get some consistency in performance they are capable of beating any team on the day. The team who can string 4-5 performances together at the business end of the tournament has every chance of taking it out and we have enough match winners to do just that.

We also wish the White Ferns all the best for their annual Rose Bowl challenge against their toughest opponents the Australians. This year the series of T20 and ODI matches will be fought on home soil in New Zealand and the team will be looking to continue their good recent success against this team.

It is also important to note the retirement of Matthew Bell in late January. Matthew was a founding member of the NZCPA in 2001 and has been a strong leader in domestic cricket since that time. We congratulate Matthew on his retirement from professional cricket and acknowledge his excellent playing record and his contribution to the sport at all levels. We wish him well in retirement and his future endeavors.

Finally we hope all members have had a great start to the new year and look forward to catching up with you all during our events programme for past players or our end of season team meetings.

Regards
Heath Mills
Chief Executive

Career and Personal Development

BACKGROUND 2007

In 2007 the CPA launched the Career and Personal Development Programme. This initiative aimed to provide a range of development opportunities for professional cricketers as they progress through their cricketing career. The aim was that each of these opportunities would increase the high performance of the sport, longer-term pathways for players and increase their general well-being.

The programme was designed to be flexible enough so that a player could use a one-off service or build a long-term structured pathway through their time in cricket. When designing the programme it was clear that the learning differences across the playing group meant diversity was necessary to maintain the interest of players over time and engage these different learning styles. To help players engage with the programme the CPA developed a website and handbook, and regular email and face to face contact with the players was planned.

The CPA has presented the programme to players since 2007 as four discrete services: transition into sport, high-performance support, leadership development, career transition. The goals of the programme included developing in players the following:

- Better understanding of personal career pathways outside sport
- Excellent business networks and a positive public profile
- A high level of communication and presentation skills
- Experience in communicating in a corporate environment
- An ability to motivate and influence
- A public perception as a community role model
- An understanding of effective business management
- An ability to manage conflict, develop effective teams and manage change
- Greater confidence to succeed in life after cricket
- A clear understanding of personal skill sets and values and how these match on and off field goals
- Greater confidence in meeting business people
- Knowledge of business start-ups

Activity to date

Since 2007 the NZCPA annual Player Survey has included questions on the Career and Personal Development Programme.

Each year players have been asked to rate the quality of the programme if they had used its services during the past 12 months. Each year respondents have been positive, in the 2008 and 2010 surveys all players involved stated the programme met or exceeded their expectations. Over 90% of players say that they would recommend the programme to other players. Through the years, between 60% and 80% of players who used the programme, have stated that it has improved their on-field success.

Overall, 131 players have used the services. During this time over 850 'activities' have been completed – an introduction taking place or a service being delivered. 79 players have used the programme one to three times, 28 players have used it between four and nine times, and a group of 18 players have taken part in at least ten activities each.

These activities have involved meetings with various business mentors, sessions with specialised support services, internships and education. As a broad summary:

- Around 30% of activity relates to players developing a career outside sport
- Around 10% are tertiary education related
- Around 20% are leadership related
- Around 15% include business (start-up) mentoring advice
- Around 5% are risk management including clinical psychology

As a total sum, over 1800 hours has been donated to players by our business mentors, worth approximately $300,000 (at normal consultancy rates).

At a glance around $90,000 has been spent by the programme on support services, the majority being around career development, clinical psychology and PR advice.

What seems to have gone well

- Players who have used parts of the programme have been happy with the quality
- The range of services is well covered
- Mentoring has been proven as an effective

BLACKCAPS World Cup Preview

model or concept for both the mentors and players

- The mentoring group is well established and covers topics, industries and regions required for the procricket playing group

What could have been done better

- An increased uptake by younger players
- More players using the CPDP and the CPA to make strategic or long-term decisions
- More players using the business expertise of the mentoring group to aid their leadership roles
- A better integration with NZC high-performance activity

For the future

2011 will see the programme continue in its current format. Mentoring and our particular mentoring group has proved its value. It now consists of approximately 300 individuals covering all regions and towns in NZ. 200 of this group are career and development mentors, 25 are small business mentors, there is an international mentoring group of 25, a Pacific Island and a Maori Mentoring Group, and a range of 20 support services such as clinical psychology. This should ensure enough coverage for player-needs through the next 2-3 years.

The area for development now shifts to player engagement. As a result the CPA will put more effort into profiling the service and spending face to face time with teams. All players are encouraged to make contact with Aidan – even just to suggest a project worth looking at in the future.

Overall the report card might read "a fair start – work still to be done".

On behalf of the CPA, I wish to thank everyone who has supported this programme to date – players, mentors and NZ Cricket.

Whether the Black Caps' recent patchy form is an ominous sign or merely the forming of the following week's fish and chip paper will be soon be discovered on a daunting World Cup campaign in the sub-continent.

Based upon previous ODI series losses in Bangladesh, Sri Lanka, India and most recently in the home summer against Pakistan, the former might be considered the more likely.

Yet anyone laying the house on New Zealand making an early exit may want to hold off, lest they end up sleeping under the skies on a concrete pillow.

The format of the World Cup, where four teams advance from each two pools of seven to the quarter-finals, means a side that catches fire at the right time will be holding the silverware aloft on April 2 in Mumbai.

And the mercurial nature of the Black Caps means there's no reason it can't be captain Daniel Vettori doing so.

Vettori's men enter the tournament ranked seventh in the ICC ODI rankings. They won only six of 21 matches in 2010, followed by a 3-2 loss to Pakistan in early 2011.

But this is an XI ready to fire. A side blessed with batting riches in the likes of McCullum, Ryder, Guptill, Taylor, Styris and company, along with the world's pre-eminent limited-over spinner in Vettori.

If the bowlers can play their part and keep the world's blazing bats in check, New Zealand's first tournament success since the 2000 Champions Trophy is not out of the question.

They'll need to make major improvements from the efforts that saw the resurgent Pakistanis head home with ODI and an earlier 1-0 Test success under their belts after the initial Twenty20 series had fallen the way of the hosts, 2-1.

An inability to post meaningful totals cost the Black Caps dear throughout the summer, starting with the two-Test series when managing meek returns of 275, 110, 356 and 293.

It was no surprise, then, that Pakistan was able to romp in to win the first Test by 10 wickets then amble along on the final day of the second for a draw when set only 274.

Positives were few and far between for the home side although 36-year-old Chris Martin's continued resemblance of a fine wine continued with nine wickets at 27.88 and Vettori etched another moment in his inspirational captaincy career with a second Test 110 and the identical amount of probing overs in both Tests.

Coupled with Vettori's continued form when whites were ditched in favour of a focus on black, it was no surprise to see him end the summer on top of the Mitre10 International MVP table.

Presenting Sir Richard's New Hall of Fame Vase

ICC Vice President Alan Isaac and NZCPA Chief Executive Heath Mills presenting Sir Richard's new Hall of Fame vase. Sir Richards original vase was broken in the recent earthquakes in Christchurch. The Hall of Fame was initially started by FICA (Federation of International Cricketers Association) and now is a joint venture with the ICC celebrating the games legends.

His 280.2 points, at an average per match of 23.35, saw him finish ahead of the ever-improving Tim Southee on 232.55. Martin had the distinction of the highest average, 30.39, and managed third despite no involvement in ODI or Twenty20 internationals.

Unfortunately there wasn't a similar success for Vettori and his troops in the six-ODI contest in which Pakistan made most of the running.

If only the bookends of the series were to be focused on, it was a raging success. It was happy days in a nine-wicket first-ODI demolition and a win by 57 runs to end the series in Auckland, but sour times in the middle.

Rain in Queenstown predated three Pakistani wins in a row – two by a landslide when setting daunting targets along with a successful chase on a road in Napier.

Their victories owed to centurions Ahmed Shehzad and Mohammad Hafeez as well as rock-solid veteran Misbah-ul-Haq, while the bowlers all played their part in a punctuation mark to a series that gained a lot of respect back for their country after the embroiling in recent match-fixing scandals.

The Black Caps will need to earn theirs when lining up in Group A of the World Cup against Pakistan again along with Australia, Sri Lanka, Kenya, Zimbabwe and Canada starting on February 20.

Quarter-final qualification is all but assured as long as the minnows are dealt with in the correct fashion. That's not to say wins elsewhere are a mere luxury, as a higher finish will ensure the avoiding of a red-hot side from the opposite side of the draw.

And as wonky as their recent path may have been, it's only three assured steps from there to the top of the world.

Coloured Clothing CHAOS

So the Auckland Aces have claimed the double, displaying their dominance in the games two shorter formats. It was earlier in the year that the dual title holders claimed the first of their two trophies.

The Aces secured a golden ticket to the lucrative Champions League in India when they powered through the national Twenty20 competition and knocked off the defending champion Central Stags in the final.

Anyone predicting a lack of focus from thereon in was to be proven wrong as the city slickers continued their stellar work in coloured clothing to qualify second for the semi-finals behind Canterbury.

The country was abuzz with HRV fever in early December as the six associations lined up some of the best Twenty20 talent from here and abroad.

The opportunity to see the likes of international drawcards David Warner, Hershelle Gibbs, David Hussey, Brad Hodge (Northern Knights), Brett Lee, Luke Wright (Wellington) Dirk Nannes and Ryan ten Doeschate (Canterbury) amongst others had the punters clicking over the turnstiles in record numbers.

However, throwing big bucks at the big names wasn't to pay off for those sides. All three came within a whisker of the final but six wins each to the Aces and Stags saw them square off at a jam-packed Colin Maiden Park.

Stags young gun Doug Bracewell got his side off to a flier with the early wickets of Lou Vincent and Martin Guptill before English import Jimmy Adams, in combination with a couple of Colins, pulled the Aces back on course.

Adams, who topped the English Twenty20 run-charts in 2010 with an incredible deluge of runs, had been quiet until the final but justified his signing in one performance with 62 off 43 balls.

Colin cameos from de Grandhomme (31 off 22) and Munro (29 off 18) steered the Aces to 158-8 in the face of 2-14 to Bracewell and 3-24 to the evergreen Michael Mason.

As the old adage goes it was runs on the board, albeit on a wicket that had yielded plenty of 160+ scores throughout the season.

But in the space of six Michael Bates balls, the most incredible in domestic cricket since Alex Tait took four wickets in a one-day final over in the 1990s, the odds had swung almost insurmountably to the home side.

Bates, a powerhouse performer throughout the past two seasons, dismissed three internationals in an over as Peter Ingram and English pro Ian Blackwell fell for golden ducks and Jamie How lasted only a ball longer.

But if Bates was the Ace up Auckland's sleeve, the Stags had a magic trick or two awaiting.

Ross Taylor requires no introduction as a Twenty20 danger man and his quicker than a run-a-ball 44, coupled with 33 to Kruger van Wyk and 27 to complete a fine match for Bracewell, breathed life into their side's hopes of defending their title.

But it was to be the Aces' fielding effort that ultimately proved the difference. Two stunners to arguably the competition's best fielder, Ronnie Hira, alongside other notable grabs by de Grandhomme, Guptill and Kyle Mills earned a four-run win when Mason couldn't strike the final ball for six.

Somewhat surprisingly, the Mitre10 MVP for the competition went to a player from a team outside the final – Canterbury's star import ten Doeschate.

The Netherlands and Essex all-rounder was a comfortable 20 points ahead of the field as he scored 285 runs, a single behind team-mate Rob Nicol, and took 12 wickets for good measure.

Nicol, who many consider to be desperately unlucky to miss a World Cup berth, can content himself with a similar strangehold on the overall MVP honours ahead of Northern Knights paceman Graeme Aldridge and Aces veteran Andre Adams.

The country's best domestic players attention now switched to the 50 over format. The competition was fierce all the way through the month of January with all six teams vying for a spot in the play offs. By the end of the round robin the top spot was secured by a consistent Canterbury side on the back of some excellent team and individual performances. Auckland claimed second spot with Otago and Northern Districts rounding out the semi finalists. Otago dealt to Northern in the first semi with Canterbury winning well against Auckland in the other. This resulted in Auckland hosting the Volts in the final preliminary semi final that saw Tim Macintosh smash the highest ever one day innings by an Aucklander and Otago simply couldn't compete with the massive team total.

The final was an absolute cracker. Lou Vincent maintained his sublime touch of late to post a match defining 153. Despite the scoreboard pressure of 335 runs to reach, the Wizards were able to keep pace in large to a 172 run partnership between Rob Nicol and Dean Brownlie. At each point the Aucklanders looked like they had the match sewn up their southern rivals would come back at them. The first ball of the last over was sent sailing over the boundary for six just to keep things interesting but in the end to no avail as the Aucklanders came out victorious.

SAMSUNG Masters Series Update

We are fast approaching the beginning of a busy month of cricket for the Samsung NZCPA Masters XI. There are no less than 4 Samsung Masters Series Events being run from mid February to Mid March.

Through the Samsung Masters Series, the NZCPA are able to offer a good level of cricket to teams or areas that may not often get the opportunities. All Samsung Masters Series offer coaching to local juniors and or youth cricketers on match day. Being able to impart some cricketing knowledge to young cricketers is an important aspect of the Samsung Masters Series concept.

First up in February is a match against the Pacific Island "Brown Caps" at the newly developed Papatoetoe Recreation Ground on Sunday the 13th of February. The Brown Caps are an Auckland Cricket initiative and we are proud to be able to offer some quality opposition to help with the development of Pacific Island cricket. This is an area we work in already with our NZCT Hooked on Cricket Programme in eight schools around Papatoetoe and Otara. We played a match last year in which League star Manu Vatuvai was involved along with Awen Guttenbeil which also acted as a catalyst to raise the profile money for Project Heal and Protect Trust which assists Pacific Islands with Tsunami support.

The second match is set to be another exciting prospect with the Australian Cricket Association team returning to our shores for a rematch at Seddon Park, Hamilton on February 24th. We are excited about this event and have two teams filled with former cricketing stars ready to do battle again. The likes of Stephen Fleming, Dion Nash and Adam Parore for the Samsung NZCPA Masters XI and Craig McDermott and Greg Matthews for the ACA team.

The third event is to be held in Rotorua on Sunday March 6th. We had a Masters Series Event there last year and are excited about heading back. This time we are to play a Rotorua U19 team at Smallbone Park. Our goal here is to work with Rotorua Cricket to assist with the profile of cricket in this area, offer some coaching to some juniors and an opportunity for some young up and coming players to test their talent against some former first class players. This is also an area we work in with our NZCT Hooked on Cricket Programme, so we are heavily in the development of cricket in this area.

Our final event is against a Wellington Development Team on March 13th. We are pleased to assist Cricket Wellington in offering some quality opposition for some developing cricketers in the Wellington area and look forward to a tough match. The venue for this is still to be confirmed.

We will email out start times for each match as soon as they are confirmed and would love to see you down at the various venues.

Ryan ten Doeschate WINS MITRE10 MVP

Canterbury Wizards' Dutch international Ryan ten Doeschate' has proven his value to his adopted team by taking out the Mitre10 MVP award for the HRV Cup and winning a $1500 Mitre10 voucher.

The Wizards narrowly missed a spot in the final and ten Doeschate was the key player in their solid performance throughout the competition. The talented all-rounder starred during the competition with consistent performances with bat and ball and was the only player to feature inside the top 10 of both the batting (6th) and bowling (9th) Mitre10 MVP point's tables.

Ten Doeschate's 284 runs (average 40.57) and 12 wickets (17.66) contributed towards a total of 105.62 Mitre10 MVP points, which was 18.32 points ahead of the Stags overseas import Michael Yardy, who finished with 87.30 points. While the Stags duo of English imports were unable to lift their team to victory in the HRV Cup final, Yardy will claim bragging rights by piping fellow import Ian Blackwell by the narrow margin of 0.21 points.

As is the increasing demand for quality cricketers and soon after the Wizards campaign had ended, ten Doeschate skipped across the Tasman to continue his Southern Hemisphere T20 assault with Tasmania in the Australian domestic equivalent competition.

A feature of this years Mitre10 MVP rankings during the HRV Cup is comparing the performance of the domestic players to that of the international imports. The Mitre10

MVP determines average points per game and although Aces import Rob Quiney tops the MVP averages table, he only participated in one match. Northern Knights import Brad Hodge averaged 15.34 points across his 5 HRV Cup games, narrowly beating out ten Doeschate (11.74) and Central Stags captain Jamie How (11.37). The Top 10 Mitre10 MVP average points per match consist of six overseas imports and four domestic players (minimum of 3 HRV Cup games played).

Canterbury Wizards opener Rob Nicol was the Mitre10 MVP's leading batsmen with 62.52 points, narrowly edging out Aaron Redmond (59.36), Brad Wilson (59.04) and the Auckland Aces Colin Munro who compiled 57.63 MVP in his debut season.

The HRV Cup is a hostile environment for bowlers with the best performers this summer dominated by experience. Andre Adams topped the Mitre10 MVP bowling table with 56.92 points, edging out a rejuvenated Richard Sherlock (52.15) who is enjoying a move back to the Wizards this summer. Michael Yardy (50.12), Graeme Aldridge (48.41) and Michael Mason (47.61) round out the top 5.

You can find out all the details and check out how to access the application at www.crichq.com

Business Club Profile – Oakley

Summers are long and hot, and the sun in New Zealand is among the harshest in the world. Recent commentary reinforces that fact that cricketers are at greater risk of experiencing damage to your eyes as a result.

Oakley proudly offers all NZCPA members the opportunity to access preferential rates on their complete range of eyewear and supporting products through the Oakley store on Queen Street. Location is not barrier, as NZCPA members throughout the country can find out full details about the offer through the 'secure members area' on the NZCPA website.

NZCPA Ambassadors

The NZCPA Ambassador programme is growing and over the summer we have been able to link seventeen NZCPA Ambassadors with HRV staff, clients and guests during the HRV Cup. The ambassador programme aims to act as an important conduit for both players and sponsors alike to feel closer to cricket and to enhance the experiences that we all have.

Requests are often made to the NZCPA for the availability of past players for promotional, speaking and other services. We appreciate the support we have from our past playing members and are proud to be able to reward our ambassadors either financially or through experiences and opportunities.

Ten Doshate Donates $1500 Mitre10 voucher

Canterbury Wizards Dutch import Ryan ten Doeschate displayed his all-round talent on the field during the HRV Cup, to win the Mitre10 MVP honour. Ryan has shown a tremendous compassion toward his adopted city of Christchurch by donating his winning $1500 Mitre10 voucher to one lucky Cantabrian.

With the help of Canterbury Cricket and New Zealand Cricket, Ryan and the NZCPA hope this gesture will make a great impact upon the lucky winner. We understand that while there was some major devastation in the city, there are also a large number of everyday families who have been affected in a myriad of ways.

The NZCPA hopes all New Zealanders will nominate their friends, family, neighbor, workmates or anyone you think is deserving of, or could benefit from, some help following the Christchurch Earthquakes.

A special thanks to Mitre10 and in particular the Mitre10 store owners in Christchurch who have assisted with this promotion. All of Canterbury's Mitre10 stores are 100% New Zealand owned and while they too have stories to tell have been very gracious in their support of all their local community.

NZCPA Masters WEEKEND

We are busy working towards putting on another successful and high quality Masters Weekend in Queenstown over April 8, 9, 10. This event is now in its eventh year and fourth in this amazing southern location and we are looking forward to returning.

The draft programme is close to being finalised with something for everyone. The cricket aspect of the weekend is still the focal point as our members dust off the pads and boots and head out to do battle once again. Canterbury attended their first event last year and claimed the title in their initial attempt. The wickets are superbly prepared at the Queenstown Event Centre of Turf Manager Pete Domingan, which makes for some free flowing cricket.

We are wrapped to have some recently joined past player members attending, along with our Patron, Barry Sinclair, Robert "Jumbo" Anderson, Artie Dick and Norman Woods have all confirmed their attendance along with a few others looking to be likely starters. This is fantastic as we continue to offer opportunities for our Past Players to remain involved within the cricketing environment.
